

«The response of the next generation» segment speakers

The European Conference on Democracy and Human Rights,

Kristiansand, Norway,

5 May 2021

Sign up: <https://www.checkin.no/event/31143/the-european-conference>

Henriette Hølland Grottvik, cofounder of Mangfoldspodden

Henriette is a bachelor graduate in Communication and Media at University of Agder in Kristiansand. She also worked as a freelancer in Norway's biggest local radio for three years, while studying music arts in high school. She cofounded the podcast "Mangfoldspodden" in 2019. The podcast started as a platform to reach out to other students and young adults about topics within diversity. It is a free platform to spread and gain knowledge about taboo topics and stereotypes, behind the curtain.

Levente Kaposi, President of the establishment of the Hungarian Socialist Party at Pécs

Levente Kaposi studies political sciences at the University of Pécs. He is born in Hungary and is soon 23 years old. He speaks three languages. He has many international friends due to the university of Pécs. He invests a lot of time into the political life, first as an activist, later as one of the leaders of the Hungarian Socialist Party. He's aim is to help rebuild democracy in Hungary and to take up the western approach of politics and economy. He aims to involve the Hungarian youth into politics because we are the future.

Emma Lunden, CEO of Bærekraftsfestivalen

She is taking a master's in economics and entrepreneurship at the University of Agder. Since 2019, she founded and has been the CEO of Bærekraftsfestivalen; a festival that wishes to increase knowledge about sustainability, and create collaborations between generations, cultures and different organizations. She has also been a part of building a female network to help and support other female leaders into the future.

Alice Bergholtz, the representative of the National Council of Swedish Youth Organisations to the Advisory Council on Youth of the Council of Europe

Alice has a long history of organizational commitments in the youth movement and specializes in citizen participation in democratic processes. Alice has worked with youth policy on multiple levels, from grassroots organizations and local group to international institutions. In her Masters thesis she investigated how young people express political participation and citizenship through media use, giving insight in how democratic structures of today are being influenced by the development of digital technologies.

Nika Bakhsoiliani Bureau Member - PFG1 Coordinator at Advisory Council on Youth - Council of Europe-

He sits in the Chair of the Human Rights Education Youth Network, policy expert and consultant regarding human rights education policies and programmes, state and municipal youth policies and participation (Publications "Youth in Transit - Youth Policy and Participation in Eastern Partnership Countries", "Participatory Youth Work"). Educator and advocate in transformative human rights education and critical pedagogy, acting against hate speech via counter-narratives.

Maja Charlotte Fleck-Baustian, segment coordinator and leader of Youth for Diversity, Agder

She studies civil economics at the University of Agder. She is 20, years old, speaks five languages and has lived in four countries growing up. In addition to her studies, she runs her own organization, Youth for Diversity, Agder (YDA). The organization aims to break down misconceptions around and discrimination towards minorities for a sustainable and environmentally friendly future through digitalisation, local and global community work. She has been a part of seven Erasmus+ projects and runs an activity club at the local high school, focusing on non-formal learning, project management and activism. This year she is working with the municipality, and as a student mentor for the Principal at the University of Agder. She is the segment coordinator.